As the Dog Soldiers came within sight of the camp, they gave chilling war cries and fired their rifles into the air. Their ponies whipped through the high weeds, the bristles of their manes catching in the tips of the grass stems. The smoke of their rifles drifted in the air, mingling with the rustling of the vegetation and the cries of the warriors. Cheyenne War Cry