Closing Children's Homes: An End To Residential Childcare

David Cliffe David Berridge

Orphanages are there because they have no parents. This is not the end to the unnecessary and harmful use of institutional care. Most children in residential care are not orphans, but have one. 17 new childcare institutions were established in the province. The closed and often isolated nature of institutional care

Closing Children's Homes: An End to Residential Child Care. Cliffe, David and Berridge, David: Closing Children's Homes: an end to. Unlike Jim Anglin, I have found that residential child care is not best suited as a vehicle. Children's homes urged to prove their benefits Community Care A reorganisation in April 1983 envisaged turning most children's homes into family. D 1992 Closing children's homes: an end to residential childcare?