Theodore Robinson at Giverny. In the late 1880s, Theodore Robinson 1852-1896 was one of the American painters who began to visit the small hamlet Giverny. Among them was Theodore Robinson, a young artist who had spent four decades in Giverny. From the hills of Giverny to the Seine River, Monet had settled in 1880, and Robinson, a frequent visitor to the picturesque town, to create multiple works depicting the same subject under different effects of light and weather.
